

In this book we join the crowds in and around Jerusalem in what would later be known by Christians as Holy Week. The year is probably AD33. They see a Galilean enter the city on the Sunday, watch him executed on the Friday and hear the rumours about what happened next. We hear the reactions of a visiting Egyptian diplomats wife, and of a Pharisee, of a boy sent to bring a donkey back, and of a pilgrim from Galilee and her teenage son; of Salome and a centurion, of a civil servant and a shopkeeper; of Matthew the Scribe; and of a gardeners labourer. Then we listen to a woman from Emmaus and to Jesus youngest brother as they look back on what have become, by then, distant events. We look at and listen to what they have to say about this Galilean - Jesus of Nazareth - and what his life, death and resurrection might mean.
